It is reported that a number of other foxes were seen, but eluded the hunter army. The hunters, tho disappointed that they only bagged one fox, yet agreed they had plenty of exercise and sport. The fox hunters do not want the public to get the idea that there are no foxes in this section, for they estimate that at least about 25 foxes have been shot in this territory by various farmers from last fall and thru this winter.

In a Washington Birthday address, Sen. Reynolds, (D., N. C.) said in part:

"What we need therefore is a President of the United States who is a genuine American nationalist who is for America first."

"Washington would certainly have opposed our merging any part of our sovereignty to any scheme of international or super-government. As to this he plainly said: 'Tis our true policy to steer clear of permanent alliances, with any portion of the foreign world.' 'He was for America first, he was against those whose feet were on American shores but whose hearts were in foreign lands. Washington was what some term an isolationist... He was an American nationalist."

"America needs today more than ever before," he said, "men who have at heart the interest of this country."

MOKENA BOWLING NEWS

The league leading Paperhangers seemed to be jittery as they lost two games to the Mokena Bankers while the second place V-Eighters won two games from the Oilers to cut the lead to two games. The Paperhangers showed a complete reversal of form from last week when they shot the best series of the season. The V-Eighters are finally traveling in high gear as they downed their jinx team the Oilers for two games and if "Ham" Hamilton returns to form the V-Eighters will be in the thick of the fight for first place. The Robins had one of their last year's members, Navy Radio Operator Norval Robinson bowling with them and they responded with a victory by defeating the Smokers for two games. Norval is home on leave after finishing his radio operators course at the University of Wisconsin.

By winning two games the Robins moved up into a tie with the Oilers for third place and four games out of the lead. The bowling situation for the league is becoming quite tense as the season is drawing to the finish in six more weeks. For instance last year's champions the Robins could win three games from the Paperhangers next Monday night and launch a drive to win their second successive championship in the Oilers, Bankers and V-Eighters also have a chance for the title. Next week the V-Eighters take on the Smokers and the Oilers play the Bankers.

Air Engineers Get There First

By Robert McCormick

(WNU Feature—Through special arrangement with Collier's Weekly)

Aviation engineers in Italy are apparently just good little gremlins, scooting hither and thither, building airports where no airports should ever be built, and building them just at the time somebody needs them.

The men and equipment responsible for making the Salerno airdrome a decisive factor in the Italian landing were our aviation engineers, one of the least publicized units of the army air forces, yet one of the basic influences in every victory we've won so far in the Mediterranean.

Aviation engineers, riding their bulldozers, go right in amongst the bullets, into the front lines, or ahead of them. Their main jobs are to build new airports in conquered territory, as they did exceedingly well in Tunisia, and to repair captured airports, as they did so nobly in Sicily.

The big boss of the Aviation Engineers is Brig. Gen. Stuart C. Godfrey, a wiry little person who looks, acts and talks just the way you'd like to think all our generals do. General Godfrey describes himself simply as "General Arnold's engineer," but he is likely to end up the most important engineer in modern history. His title is Air Engineer, Army Air Forces.

As a sample of how Godfrey's men work, there is the story of how they built five airports in three days near Shellia, in North Africa.

Brig. Gen. Donald Davison, engineer commander in those parts, was looking for one of his companies. He started through a sector occupied by an American armored division. Officers stopped him, and asked him if he knew he was in the front lines, and headed right out into no man's land, beyond even the American's outer patrols.

'Damn Fools' Are Up Ahead. Davison obviously did not know the surprise on his face would have detonated a bomb. He asked the boys if they'd seen anything of a company of aviation engineers. The answer was quick and positive.

"Yes, we have," said one of the officers, "if you mean those damn fools who wouldn't pay any attention to us and took those big machines out. We think they're about 10 or 15 miles down the road."

Finally Davison found his engineers. They had put in a few defensive guns, had dug themselves slit trenches, and were at work building an airfield right under the Nazis' noses.

In three days—three days is 72 hours of work to the engineers—the men built five serviceable fields and moved north 110 miles to the area around Le Ser, to grind out more 'dromes.

The five-in-three deal was the result of careful planning and fast movement. The whole North African battlefield had been looked over from the air, and spots picked out which seemed generally favorable for landing fields. When it developed that a batch would be needed specifically around Shellia, the engineers again flew over the ground, choosing more definite locations.

Then the engineer troops, with their bulldozers and scrapers and shovels and all the rest of their equipment, went roaring overland, marching day and night, and they went so fast that they paid no attention to the fact that they had gone clean through the front lines. Or if they did notice it, they were too stubborn to care.

Their ability to build airports just one jump ahead of our combat airplanes is one of the big reasons we gave the Axis such a bouncing around in North Africa as well as in Sicily. By having airfields up front, we kept our air support constantly with—and ahead of—our troops.

Air Force Has to Be Near Front. There could be no delays in bringing up our airpower. The tactical air force always had to get places ahead of our troops, to blast down enemy resistance before our troops arrived. The strategic air force had to reach deeper and deeper behind the enemy lines, hacking at the channels through which the enemy brought up food, munitions and other supplies. Both groups constantly had to be as near the Nazis as they could get.

This meant turning out airfields at an amazing rate. It meant flattening out barren mountains, filling in colossal mudholes, trying to hold down expanses of drifting, destructive sand. It meant using fumbling native labor, carrying special peewee equipment and airborne engineers hundreds of miles at a leap by air, and working night and day in bleak stretches of battlefields.

That's what the aviation engineers are up against. Yet they conjured up airports so fast that the pilots never knew, from day to day, where they'd find one next.

Washington, D. C. COMPLAINTS OF 'WASTED MANPOWER'

The fathers' draft has brought on a new series of complaints about "wasted manpower" in the armed services stationed in the U. S. A.

Pending a call to action, a feeling of idleness and waste becomes a demoralizing factor. The men on the home front generally suffer most from the age-old service disease of "just waiting around."

The type of thing that happens in the waiting period is illustrated in a confidential survey made at the naval dirigible station at Lakehurst, N. J., which brought forth the following facts.

1. The navy uses 100 to 115 men to handle a blimp when it lands, whereas Goodyear handles the same blimp with 15 civilians.

2. As at many shore stations, duty usually consists of 24 hours on, then 24 hours stand-by (which means waiting around to see if anything happens), then 24 hours liberty. Then this is repeated. Many men complain that the 24 hours of loafing at stand-by could be used for some constructive type of work.

3. More than 1,000 civilians are employed to recondition ships at high rates of pay, while enlisted men who could do the job and need the training lie around idle.

4. A high wire fence, guarded by armed sailors, surrounds Lakehurst. Then, inside the fence, a marine guards the outside of each hangar. Then, inside the hangar, two civilians also stand guard.

5. The Lakehurst commissary, which handles about 100 customers per day, is staffed to handle about 1,000. It has 10 clerks, 2 commissioned officers and 1 cashier. Any civilian groceryman plus an assistant could easily handle the whole business.

Multiply Lakehurst's wasted manpower by the navy's many other shore stations and it runs into thousands of men.

Note: The men themselves are not to blame. Most of them chafe at inactivity, want to see action.

Effect on the Men.

One significant indication of how glutted the navy is with manpower is in the boot-training camps, designed to transform a civilian into a sailor. This training used to last three weeks. Now it has been running four months or more. And after finishing this boot-training, thousands of men lie around for months in OGU's (outgoing units) awaiting assignment to a school or other activity.

In the past year, also, many enlisted men come to the conclusion that navy schools are being maintained mainly for the purpose of keeping them occupied.

Slump in Draft Quotas.

Most significant fact about the manpower situation is that, all last summer, the army and navy were getting less than the quota of men they requested from the draft boards, but did not complain. Few people outside the government realized it, but even at the time the fathers' draft was under vigorous discussion on Capitol Hill, the army and navy were not complaining about the failure of draft boards to fill the quotas.

During the first months of 1943, draft boards overfilled their quotas. But in April, they began to slump off. In that month, the army-navy asked for 334,000 men but actually got only 299,000. This would not have been significant if it had occurred in one month only. But in May, the services asked Selective Service for 303,000 men, got only 264,000. However, there was no complaint from either the army or navy.

Again, in June, the services asked for 320,000 men, but got only 288,000. In July, they asked for 355,000 but got only 299,000, only slightly more than the June figure despite the fact that the quota requested by the army and navy had been increased. In August, the army-navy request dropped to 299,000, and the draft boards supplied only 221,000 men, a scant 75 per cent of the number asked for. In September, the army-navy quota was 313,000 men, but they got only 214,000 or 70 per cent of what they asked for.

However, at no time did the armed services make any protest. They seemed content to coast along with what the draft boards were giving them.

This was all during the period when the father-draft was under serious discussion and when the administration was taking a vigorous stand that fathers had to be drafted.

What the answer is, no one quite knows. Highup army-navy officers probably know but won't talk. However, the Truman committee may ask some potent questions.

The symphony orchestra, in using from 80 to 110 instruments, has a range of about 100 semitones, or four fifths of the number audible to the human ear, says Collier's.

Of the instruments having the greatest individual range, the piano has 88 semitones, the harp 78, the marimba and the xylophone 54 each, the cello 44, and the violin, the accordion and the soprano clarinet 40 each.

THE STORY THUS FAR: Lieut. Col. Frank Kurtz, pilot of the old Flying Fortress, known as "The Swoose," which escaped from Clark Field, tells of that fatal day when the Japs struck in the Philippines. Old 99, another Flying Fortress, is struck down before it can get off the ground, killing eight of her crew. Kurtz explains how Old 99 was due for camouflage, then orders were countermanded, and instead they were to load with bombs. Then he was ordered to jerk the bombs and reload with cameras for a reconnaissance trip over Formosa. They get word over the air that bombs are dropping over Clark Field. Then all are electrified by the shout, "Here they come!"

CHAPTER III

"I hadn't long to wait, because the nose of that leading V had passed the bomb-release line, and now came the first, unmistakable whistle—just as we'd heard it thousands of times over Muroc—and then the dull cr-rump! The first bomb of their pattern had hit way up the field, three thousand yards away. I didn't know then it had hit the mess hall I had just left, and killed Bill Coker, our group engineering officer.

"But now was the time to run for our lives, because here came more whistles, and the nose of the formation was over us now, like a huge cloud with giant hailstones falling from it.

"So now Glenn and I ran for the nearest foxhole. It was a shallow one, two feet deep, built to hold one man, but we both jumped for it, and not until later did we realize there was a man already in it. We could think of nothing then except this earthquake roar and grinding and the whistling of a mighty storm moving down the field. You see there were about seventy planes in that formation, and each plane was to drop a train of about twelve bombs, which made around eight hundred bombs that were to cover that rectangular pattern in about the time it's taking me to say a few of these sentences. Meanwhile we were bracing ourselves—getting our arms and legs adjusted, worming as low as we could in that shallow hole—for what we knew was coming. I pulled my tin hat down to cover the side of my face and cheek against bomb fragments. Now it began. Not so much the thunderous roars as the shaking—at its mildest, the hard dirt quivered like a steel-tired truck thundering over cobblestones, and at its worst, bucked and pitched like a bronco. I kept feeling if I could only stay on a little longer I would live, because death was very close now—the grinding roars and whistles, the quivering, pitching earth—was coming closer, was thundering over us. And then quite suddenly was gone—the bomb trains had crossed the field, the pattern abruptly ended a thousand yards beyond it, and the Japanese formation was moving off.

"Yet even as the low hum of motors died away we were afraid to move. I was afraid to take my tin hat from my face for another half-minute, because maybe another V might be above us at its bomb-release line, and other trains might start thundering down.

"But the quiet continued and now we raised up in our trench. The black cloud of bombers was moving off, empty of its hailstones—probably just now closing their bomb-bay doors, wheeling in the distance to head back for home. It was very still except for a rising crackle of fire—the smoke from our burning planes was just starting, the climbing columns had not yet blossomed into thick black plumes.

"But over this crackle we could hear another hum. Then we saw it, as we peered east over the edge of the field: a string of fighters—they must be our P-40's! We didn't know that all but a few of our P-40's had been bombed and shot down and their field ruined before the bombers came to us.

"So we stood there brushing the dirt from our clothes (one bomb had hit only fifteen feet away from me) and watched this formation approach. They were coming around beautiful Mount Arayat in a long string like geese flying north in the fall, and at only a little higher altitude—say 2,000 or 3,000 feet.

"Can you blame us for feeling good—to see some of our own gang in the air at last?

"All of a sudden Glenn Rice yelled, 'Look! For God's sake look at that red circle!' There it was on those up-curved wings—not a lipstick red, but a kind of orange red, the Rising Sun of Japan. They weren't P-40's, as we now could see, but Nakajimas—and some Zeros—coming in from the direction of Corregidor, an attack string, each Jap leaning out as he circled to pick out which Fortress on the ground he would attack.

"As they circled we could hear our ammunition dump going up—it was like Fourth of July as the bombs burst in the heat—and in between the bangs there was that rising crackle.

"A three-quarter circle they made, like cracking a blacksnake whip over our already stricken airfield, and then they began to peel off to clean up with strafing what few Fortresses their bombers had missed.

"Ahead of me I could see men disappearing into a ditch, some diving head-first into it. (Bob Meyer almost broke his neck.) I tumbled in, and when I picked myself up I saw a soldier deliberately, slowly walking up to it, but just as he stood at the lip he seemed to collapse and came tumbling down. I thought the earth had caved in under his feet. Then as he struggled to his feet I saw his whole hip had been blown away. Now he collapsed in the arms of a sergeant and a private and died before our eyes—there was nothing we could do.

"Meanwhile we are watching the Jap fighters. Near our ditch is a Fortress snugly in a revetment.

"There is a sudden hammering of guns, and we see one of the Nakajimas has picked out this particular Fortress as his prey.

"Again and again the Jap comes in—making his approach (it was beautiful flying) after he has rolled out of his turn at about 150 feet—but his flight path brings him down as low as fifteen feet above the Fortress' wings. There is a routine about it. As he straightens out from his turn and comes at the big motionless bomber, first his small .25-caliber wing guns open up with a rattle, filling the air with a skein of tracers. Then, when these white threads show him he is dead on his target, we hear him open up with his 20-millimeter cannon.

"And as he pulls up off the target, he sprays with steel the lip of the ditch right over our heads as we crouch in the bottom. Each time we glimpse the pilot as he rolls in for the attack. He wears a yellow scarf, but for the rest, in goggles and helmet, he might have been any of us. I don't think he notices us—he is too intent on the Fortress. It is only that we are right in his line of fire, and each time as he starts to pull up, his guns spray our trench lip before he has time to take his thumb off the button.

He collapsed in the arms of a sergeant and died before our eyes.

"But suppose he does see us? Some of the men had been loading bombs when the attack came and have their shirts off—their white backs are wonderful targets. So now we start to organize ourselves in our rat trap, pounding away with orders. If he does spot us, all he's got to do is come right down that ditch with his guns open.

"What antiaircraft we have is thumping away now, but it isn't doing much good. In the first place it is so placed that the black smoke billowing up from the burning Fortresses gets between the Zeros and the ground gunners, blanketing their field of fire. In the second place, it was never designed to operate at as close a range as three hundred yards.

"So in our ditch we start a little war of our own—forty of us versus the Imperial Japanese Air Force; or rather those of the forty who have .45's, which is the pilots and the bombardiers. Every time that Jap strafes comes over, we bang away at him—I can't say we do any damage, and all we had to show for it afterward was a damn dirty pistol to clean, but it gives us some satisfaction.

"Meanwhile from all over the field you can hear two sound sequences—first the high rattle of the Jap .25-caliber wing guns as the tracers feel for the target, then the slower pounding of the cannon as they drive the main punch home—that I've described before. The other sequence was more heartbreaking. You'd hear a rising, hissing p-p-p-f-f-o-o-FFF! which means a tracer has gone sizzling into the gas tank of one of our dear old Fortresses—followed quickly by a great roar (everything letting loose at once), which means that the burning gasoline has exploded her bombs.

"But the Jap pilot with the yellow scarf who is working on the Fortress in the revetment next to us is now really getting down to business.

coming in lower and closer each time. As we spot him coming tearing in for the attack we yell out our orders and grovel on our faces as his wing guns rattle and his cannon thump, followed by the ear-splitting roar of his motors as he swishes past over our heads—we popping futilely at the racing shadow with our .45's.

"On the eighth pass his tracers found their target—there was the hissing roar of gasoline, and from every one of the many bullet holes in the fuselage there billowed black smoke, enveloping her completely. But he made the great mistake of coming back just once again—maybe only to see what he had done. But for whatever reason, at this point the antiaircraft opened up on him through a hole in the smoke. He seemed to jump a little in the air, and at the end of the run he didn't chandelle as he usually did, but kept on going and—'Look!' somebody said. 'A puff of smoke!' Sure enough it was—only maybe he was only clearing his engine—but three seconds later it was a definite black trail behind him.

"We held our breath as he wobbled and wavered off like a wounded bird, and when he rolled over on one wing down behind the horizon, never to rise again, we let out a cheer that shook more dirt down the walls of our ditch. Because up to then it had been all their Saturday.

"This seemed to signal the end of the attack, for now the Nakajimas and Zeros rose from the field like crows from a well-picked carcass, and falling into formation, disappeared around Mount Arayat in the direction of their carrier, which lay somewhere out of sight off Luzon down under the horizon.

"Now we climbed out of the ditch and started back toward Operations to report. But first we had to walk around the wreckage of the poor old Fortress. We walked wide not only because of the shimmering heat, but because it was a shameful thing we could hardly bear to watch, which no one will understand who doesn't love those big, beautiful B-17's as we did. There she was in her death agony—the plates had weltered quickly, leaving only her naked skeleton shimmering in the heat, and licked by oily flame. It made you sick and you wanted to look the other way.

"The rest of the field was littered with charred skeletons of planes. You'll remember the 19th Bombardment Group had comprised thirty-five proud Flying Fortresses. A dozen of them had been down at Del Monte Field in the southern island of Mindanao and so escaped this attack. Colin Kelly, who had come up from Australia, was flying one of them. But of all the rest which had been here on Clark Field, only five could be called airplanes any more. Even these five were badly damaged, and none of them could fly. But by pooling the five wrecks, replacing a wing here, a tail there, and taking two undamaged engines from a third, the Colonel hoped we could salvage in all of the two dozen which stood on the field that morning, three planes which might get into the air—when the runway was cleared.

"As for the boys who hadn't come back from the hills yet, the Colonel wasn't in the least worried. 'It's like any good hunting dog,' he explained. 'The first time you put steel across him, of course he's scared. But after that—well, those fellows that ran away today will make as good soldiers as they come.'

"It was now late in the day, and he told me there was nothing I could do, and it would be all right to leave the target area until morning—in fact we'd better, because the Japs would probably be back to night.

"Lieutenant Elmer Brown happened to be standing there with me, so we decided to go out together, and I left my bike, because it wouldn't be fair to Brownie. Brownie, who always has had a comfortable amount of money, said he'd call a taxi. But I knew nothing would come of that. The servants and almost everybody else were back in the hills, some of them still running, and anything you wanted done that day you had to do for your self. So we collected a bedding roll apiece at the barracks and started off down the road. We'd walked for quite a while when at a crossroad, we came on a convoy of trucks—it was an antiaircraft outfit being moved back into position, I suppose where they could better protect the charred carcasses of our bombers.

"So we hooked a ride on one of these trucks, which was headed for a little native village around the other side of our field and a reasonably safe distance away. We got out when they stopped and, going to the nearest house, by signs asked the owner if he had a room for the night. He was a very nice fellow and took us upstairs to his own. I don't know where he slept. We unrolled our bedding on the bamboo floor and spread our mosquito nets and Brownie went right off to sleep.

"I lay awake. That ack-ack convoy was still moving in and getting settled. Now and then a truck-driver wouldn't hear a sentry call 'Halt!' and would go rumbling by, and you would hear a rattle crack a couple of times.

JESUS PRESENTS HIMSELF AS THE MESSIAH

LESSON TEXT: Mark 11:1-10, 15-18.
GOLDEN TEXT: Again the high priest asked him, and said unto him, Art thou the Christ, the Son of the Blessed? And Jesus said, I am.—Mark 14:61, 62.

As our Lord entered upon the last week of His earthly ministry, the time had come for Him to present Himself officially to His people as their Messiah. As He did so, we observe that He then had and now has a right to claim all that we have and are, as well as to exercise judgment over us.

I. His Right to Property (vv. 1-7). We are so prone to call our possessions our own, and to hold them for our selfish purposes. Just a moment's reflection makes us aware that we are but stewards holding our things, as we hold ourselves, for the use of God.

That means that the Lord need only send for what we have, and we should gladly yield it to Him. "The Lord hath need" is the only requisition we need. He has absolute priority. And yet the very fact that He has need of us and what we have, dignifies our service or sacrifice on His behalf.

How surprising it was that the One who made and upholds all things (Col. 1:16, 17) should have to say, "The Lord hath need of him," in sending for a humble beast of burden. Yet therein lies a marvelous truth. He has graciously so ordered the universe that He has need of us and of our possessions.

Let us also learn the important lesson of unquestioning obedience taught in verse 4. "They went their way" to do what the Lord told them to do. How greatly simplified and glorified would be the lives of Christian people if they would thus obey Christ.

As He came riding into the city, we observe

II. His Right to Praise (vv. 7-10). God says, "Him that offereth praise glorifieth me" (Ps. 50:23), and the believer recognizes that "praise is comely for the upright" (Ps. 33:1). Jesus is entirely worthy of the praise of every heart and voice.

Presenting Himself as their Messiah, Jesus received the enthusiastic acclaim of His disciples and friends, who were probably joined by others who were drawn by the excitement.

The Pharisees did not join in (see Luke 19:39, 40) nor did the city, not even knowing who He was (Matt. 21:10, 11). So it is today; some love and praise Him, some hate Him, others just ignore Him. Of which class are you?

He gave Jerusalem and the nation a final opportunity to receive Him. It was not yet too late, but it was their last chance. Such a time comes in the life of everyone of us. They rejected Him. Do we?

But even though some did reject, let us not forget that there were those who shouted, "Hosanna," who cast their garments down before Him and waved palms of victory and joy. Thank God for their holy enthusiasm. Pray God that we may have a little more of it.

III. His Right to Punish (vv. 15-18).

People like to hear about a God of love, one who knows their weakness, and is kind toward their infirmities. But we must not forget that God shows His love by a great and holy hatred of sin, and a desire to deliver us from that sin. This means that He must and will deal in drastic fashion with those who persist in their sin.

A second time He drove out from His Father's house those who had made it a place of merchandise, of commercialized thievery.

This is a majestic picture. The Son of God and Son of Man steps into the center of this unholy traffic and with mighty, holy indignation (not anger) drives it out. The people who had suffered long because of this religious racket, which paid a nice "cut" to the priests themselves (probably as a "gift" even as such things are managed now), were jubilant.

We read in the same story in Matthew 21:12-22 that the boys who were in the temple (for such is doubtless the meaning of "children" in verse 15) were so delighted at this magnificent exercise of His divine authority that they broke out into "Hosannas," which really amounted to a holy "Hurrah."

Well, why not? Hurrah for our Lord! He will not tolerate iniquity even though it hides under the cloak of religion. He is not afraid to speak out and to act against sin and corruption.

Possibly the church would reach a good many more men and boys in our day if it would step out in faith to fight the wrong and support the right. Then maybe the young men would shout, "Hurrah for the church."

The chief priests and scribes were afraid and displeased and began to plot against Him. The passage in Matthew indicates that their anger was aroused both by the acts of Jesus and the praise of the boys.

ONE is just as cute as the other; both are ruffled, both button down the back. Little sister's however, has matching panties!

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1899 is designed for sizes 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 years. Size 2 pantie and pinafore require 2½ yards 35 or 39-inch material.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1892 is designed for sizes 10, 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Corresponding bust measurements 28, 30, 32, 34, 36 and 38. Size 12 (30) requires 3½ yards 32 or 35-inch material.

Remove all stains from table linens before putting them into the wash. This prevents their becoming permanent.

Save bread and cracker crumbs for poultry dressing, meat extenders and scalloped dishes.

When you break off a length of thread, always tuck the end in the notch provided on the spool. If the notch has become broken, a new one can easily be made with a razor blade.

Don't make dust cloths out of that old sheet. Cut it down to make a cot sheet, crib sheet, or a pillowcase.

Lightly waxed woodwork cuts down cleaning. Rub spots that are handled often—banisters, areas around doorknobs and windows—with a thin coat of liquid wax.

All new cooking utensils (if you find any) should be thoroughly greased and heated before using for the first time.

Preserve your metal costume jewelry with a quilted folder. This will prevent tarnishing and scratching and save time when you're hurrying to find your favorite piece.

Due to an unusually large demand and current war conditions, slightly more time is required in filling orders for a few of the most popular pattern numbers.

Jan. 9, 1944

Dear friend:

I don't quite know how to write this letter to you. I can say I'm ashamed for not writing and thanking you for the paper each week. It's just one of those things. I just never could get around to writing.

I am at a rest camp now, after helping take Tarawa. Boy was that an adventure. I never will get over it. We spent thirty six hours in a Higgins boat before hitting the pier. We were penned down by machine gun fire for about two hours before we could get into the water and wade and swim to the beach.

I was just reading the Jan. 7 issue of the Bulletin and confidentially I don't believe I know half of the people mentioned in the Mokena strip. I'll have a job getting acquainted all over again when I do come back. Thanking you again and God bless the Bulletin.

Sincerely,
Cpl. Manning Hutson

NEW LENOX

Jan. 18, 1944

Dear Mr. Semmler:

I wish to express my sincere appreciation for the copies of the News-Bulletin which you have sent me for the past 3 months. Although I am no longer a resident of Illinois I have many friends there and enjoy reading about them. We all have a part in this war, and yours that of keeping Service men and women informed of the home town news, is a noble one.

I cannot tell you much about the work I do as it is of a rather confidential nature, but I can say that much of the mail that is sent to Navy men in the Pacific area goes thru the office in which I work.

My address has been changed slightly and it appears in its proper form at the end of this letter.

It is my wish, that you and your family enjoy health, prosperity and happiness to the fullest measure in 1944.

Sincerely yours,
Roy H. Clark, S1c; 8788108 Fleet Records Division (Duty) Fleet Post Office; San Francisco, 7 Cal.

Ration Token Point Program Needs Investigation

by Fred E. Busbey, M. C.

The following speech was recently delivered in congress by Congressman Fred Busbey of the Third District.

Speech of January, 26, 1944.

Mr. Speaker: For more than a month I have hoped it would not be necessary for me to make this speech. But when I read in the Congressional Record of last Thursday, January 20, 1944 a reply made by Mr. Chester Bowles Administrator of the Office of Price Administration, on the subject of "ration tokens", to Mr. Chas. Gordon, Managing Director of the American Transit Association, I decided it was my duty to inform the Congress of the facts in the controversy that has been going on regarding the new ration token program to be put into effect on Feb. 27 next.

I feel most certain, Mr. Speaker, that after Members have heard the facts they will agree that this entire program should be thoroughly investigated, and a report of the findings made available to every Member.

I want to make it clear that I have not at any time opposed the ration token program as such, but I do oppose the high handed manner in which the size of these ration tokens was decided upon, and the manner in which the contract to manufacture the tokens was awarded by OEM.

If this contract were subject to review by the General Accounting Office, I am confident that it would be immediately cancelled. It smells to high heaven.

The last two sentences of Mr. Bowles' letter, which was dated January 13, 1944 were as follows: "But as far as the size of the tokens is concerned, that is a closed issue. No amount of controversy will change the decision."

This attitude, Mr. Speaker, along with all the facts surrounding the token program, is another example and further proof as to why the people of the United States are so thoroughly disgusted with the way the Price Control Act has been administered by the bureaucrats of the OPA.

After all, this is neither Russia nor Germany, yet, and there is no good reason why Chester Bowles, or any other appointed official, should take such a dictatorial attitude.

Inasmuch as I believe I am the only Member of Congress who has, shall we say, lived with this token program even before the OPA had definitely decided to go ahead with it, I think I am the only Member qualified at this time to advise the Congress about some of the things that have been taking place.

I assure you the story regarding the ration tokens I am about to tell is not a pleasant one, and I do not take any pride in telling it.

Nevertheless, the story is none the less amazing and is one I believe should not be withheld any longer. I might add that the only reason I have not told it sooner is that until I read Mr. Bowles' reply to Mr. Gordon, I still had hoped something could be worked out whereby OPA would recind their order to go ahead with their program to have manufactured and put into circulation 2 billion of the "nuisance size" ration tokens.

Mr. Speaker, in addition to the tremendous amount of inconvenience and harm this nuisance size token will cause, I believe you should be apprised of the following facts.

After nearly four months of conferences beginning June, 1943 between officials of the OPA and representatives of industries that would be affected by tokens, an understanding was reached by all parties concerned whereby the ration tokens to be used would be of 0.888 inches in diameter. Release OPA 3305 of October 13, 1943 confirmed 900 million tokens 0.888" in diameter had been awarded.

While even this size would likely cause some damage, nevertheless the industries affected were willing to absorb any loss that might occur. Furthermore, the officials of OPA in charge of the rationing program promised the industries concerned that if the OPA contemplated any change in the size of the tokens to be used, the industries would be notified in order that they might have an opportunity to state their objections to any proposed change.

Mr. Speaker, you can imagine in view of this promise the amazement of everyone concerned, when the first knowledge they received of any change in the size of ration tokens was when they received a letter from OPA dated November 22, 1943 stating that "within the last two or three days the decision has been made to change the size of the ration tokens" to 0.642 inches.

This notification of change in size of token was not mailed from Washington until five days after the final decision was made. No opportunity was given to the affected industries to be heard prior to the making of this decision, in total disregard of the promise given.

This smacks of dictatorship. An analysis of the record discloses that OPA in awarding the contract relied entirely upon the representation of the token manufacturer that the new tokens would not injure the industries, and yet no such protective provision was placed in the contract.

Now, Mr. Speaker I desire to call to your attention to an entirely different phase of this ration token program, one that has never been discussed publicly by anyone up to now. This phase has to do with the estimates of the number ration tokens needed, and the conditions under which the contracts to manufacture both the 0.888 size as well as the 0.642 size tokens were made. On September 18, 1943 the Budgeting, Accounting and Fiscal Control Division known as the Central Administrative Services, of the Office of Emergency Management, sent out an invitation to bid on rationing tokens to 104 concerns in the United States. The specifications in this invitation to bid asked for bids on a quantity of 900 million tokens of a molded plastic material of a diameter of 0.900 inches, and a thickness of 0.105 inches. There was also provided in the invitation to bid an opportunity to submit bids on an alternate material other than that specified. One very significant fact I desire to call to your attention at this point is that at no place in the twenty page invitation to bid was there any provision for the bidder to submit a bid on any size other than that specified; namely 0.900 in diameter and 0.105 in thickness.

On October 10, 1943 the bids were opened. There was not one company of the entire 104 that had submitted a bid in conformity with the specifications as set forth in the invitation to bid. There was, however, a bid received, and only one bid to make the 900 million tokens out of a very critical material, vulcanized fiber submitted by the Osborne Register Company of Cincinnati, Ohio to be of a thickness of 0.050 which is less than half the thickness of 0.105, as specified in the invitation to bid.

After this contract was let, someone in OPA decided they would need not 900 million ration tokens, but 2 billion of them. This necessitated getting a release from the War Production Board of more than twice as much of this very critical material, vulcanized fiber as was originally obtained. It was when the War Production Board notified the Office of Price Administration that it was impossible to allocate additional fiber to make tokens, that the decision to reduce the size from 0.900 to 0.642 was ordered by OPA, without consulting a single individual connected with the industries that would be affected, and in total disregard of their promise to notify them.

It wasn't bad enough for the Central Administrative Service Division of OEM to let the original contract under the conditions they did, but they turned right around a little more than a month later, and gave the Osborne Register Company a new contract for 2 billion of the smaller sized tokens, without receiving competitive prices at $1.19 per thousand; or $2,380,000. Think of that! Letting a contract for more than two and a third million dollars without obtaining one competitive bid.

I think you will agree this was bad enough; but wait until you hear this. No one in OEM, OPA or WPB could show me a single piece of paper of any kind on which there appeared any figures from the Osborne Register Company, or any other concern to ascertain whether or not $1.19 per thousand was a fair price, or an excessive price for manufacturing these tokens.

Mr. Speaker, I am sure by this time this question is in all your minds: What if the Osborne Register Company does make a huge profit under this contract, won't the government recover these excess profits when they negotiate the Company under the renegotiation law?

This contract, I have been advised Mr. Speaker, cannot be renegotiated, because it is not considered a war contract, and therefore does not come under the Renegotiation Act. Therefore, in that event regardless of how much money the Osborne Company might make; the government can't recover a single penny under the Renegotiation Act. Another phase of this picture that should by all means be considered in an investigation of the ration token fiasco, is how it was finally decided to use vulcanized fiber for these tokens, and why the company that first brought to the attention of the OPA the possibility of using vulcanized fiber, the Green Duck Company of Chicago, was given no consideration or opportunity to bid after the decision was made to manufacture the tokens of vulcanized fiber.

As a matter of fact, an investigation will reveal that the Green Duck Company did more work in the nature of research and compilation of data for the War Production Board and the OPA on this particular material, vulcanized fiber, than any other token manufacturer in the United States. While the contract to manufacture fiber tokens was not let until October 12, 1943, the Green Duck Company was certainly discouraged when they received a letter under date of August 18, 1943, signed by Mr. D. P. Morgan, Director of the Chemicals Division of the War Production Board, in which he gave the following reasons why in their opinion it would be inadvisable to use vulcanized fiber, namely:

1. The military requirements are taking almost the entire production of the fiber industry.
2. It would be physically impossible for the vulcanized fiber industry to produce the required amount of vulcanized fiber even though all other commitments were deferred.
3. The third reason was the ease with which ration tokens made of fiber could be counterfeited.

Less than two months later, regardless of this warning, the contract was let for vulcanized fiber tokens.

While it will be admitted by officials of the War Production Board that vulcanized fiber is not as critical at present as it was last August, at the same time they will admit they cannot guarantee that the market for vulcanized fiber due to military requirements might not be very tight at most any time in the future.

Mr. Bowles' letter of January 13th points out some of the critical uses of fiber, in the war effort, and since the ration token program will require a large production for replacements, the entire program may collapse unless some other material is adopted for tokens.

AGRICULTURAL DEFERMENTS BASED ON PRODUCTION

As a result of meetings between the Cook County Selective Service Boards, Farm Advisory Committees and the War Board, a standard of agricultural deferment has been worked out which is based upon production more than has been the case in 1943.

A study of the first 35 IIC and IIC men in Cook County show that the average units per man on both vegetable and dairy, also general farms were close to an average of 22 units. For this reason the standard of units has been raised from 16 to 22 with modifications for one man farms and small truck farms. Also a limitation of IIC men has been established on these various farms.

"We do not believe," states Carl Bornet, Chairman, Cook County U. S. D. A. War Board, "that the above system will disturb farms that are producing heavily, however the intentions are to increase production and to point out that where poor soil land has been plowed and put into vegetables on the theory that one acre of vegetables constitutes one unit or for the farm that has old and worn out cows that are producing very little milk, to get units is out. The Farm Committees for the most part can identify farms that have average or above production and only on disputed cases will proof be asked for. We suggest that in the coming months when IIC and IIC questionnaires will be reviewed that registrants who wish to may submit some form of evidence of their production. It may mean the use of milk sales slips or vegetable sale slips. It may mean that the crop averages and livestock numbers be very carefully determined and submitted along with 401B's. We also have recommended that proof of production be submitted under a Notary statement which is an oath that these figures are accurate and correct."

At the various Farmer's War Meetings which are to be held in Cook County the production system for agricultural deferments will be further explained. These meetings to be held are as follows: Bremen, Friday, February 25th at 8 p. m. in the Hall at Oak Park Avenue, near 171st Street, Tinley Park, Illinois. Palos, Lemont, Lyons and Orland, Friday, March 10th, 8 p. m. at the Orland Park High School.

LAUGH if you want at the fellow who has his garden planned on paper. Of course, he can't grow vegetables in his living room, but he has a good idea how much seed he needs and how many plants he has to order. And when he starts to garden in the spring, he'll know where those seeds and plants are going to be placed. This is a definite time saver when the first planting days come along.

This foresighted person will probably lay out his garden in long rows to facilitate the handling of a large area. He can then cultivate his crops with either a hand cultivator or one that is horse-drawn, if the latter is available. A hand cultivator will do the job, however, and its durability is worth the small expense it involves. If small row crops are planted in rows 15 to 18 inches apart and larger crops like corn and beans in rows of 30 to 36 inches apart, hand cultivation is simple and easy.

This armchair gardener probably has his plot laid out with the perennial crops located on one side of the garden, undisturbed by the plowing. Next to the perennials he will plant early crops like cabbage, early potatoes, lettuce, onions and spinach. Beside the early crops he will plant the late crops—those planted in May and June such as snap beans, lima beans, fall and winter cabbage, tomatoes and cucumbers.

With a plan like this worked out on paper, any gardener will be able to make economical use of time and garden space. Until next time, lots of luck with your gardening plans, everybody.

THEY'RE SCARCE!

It's wartime wisdom to take care of your electric iron!

Keep cord away from hot iron. Plug cord into iron first, then outlet. Remove from outlet first, then from plug. If cord gets too hot, have iron and cord inspected immediately. DISCONNECT IRON WHEN YOU LEAVE ROOM.

After iron cools, put it away where it won't gather dust.

Do not over-heat iron. Have right temperature for each garment.

Do not press down. Heat—not pressure—smooths clothes.

Keep bottom clean. When iron is cool, wipe with damp cloth. If necessary use soap suds or mild cleanser first. Never scrape or dip in water.

Do not drop iron. This is how most damage occurs.

War's Effect On Illinois' 1943 Income

CHICAGO—Continued decrease in Illinois state emergency relief expenditures due to expanded wartime employment is disclosed in the above chart comparing income and outgo in the 1943 and 1942 fiscal years, prepared by Barcus, Kindred & Company, specialists in Illinois municipal bonds.

At the same time, rationing's effect in reducing purchases of civilian goods and curtailing gasoline consumption is reflected in a decline in sales tax and gas tax income.

Although Illinois' 1943 revenue was about 6 per cent below the record 1942 level, income exceeded expenditures by $30,876,580. With accumulations from the two preceding years, the state had a $73,396,988 surplus at the beginning of 1944.

Analysis of other wartime trends in income and outgo, based on a study of state finance department figures, reveals that: Emergency relief expenditures declined 41 per cent in 1943.

With the exception of Federal Aid, all major sources of revenue recorded varying decreases. These included: Gasoline tax, 20 per cent; motor vehicle tax, 13.2 per cent; sales tax, 7 per cent. Liquor and cigarette tax income was fractionally lower.

Old Age Assistance payments increased from $46,913,642 in 1942 to $51,998,998 last year, while allotments to dependent children rose from $5,625,157 to $10,779,334.

Expenditures for highways and for education, including state aid to local schools were virtually unchanged. Gasoline tax distributions and refunds to counties and cities decreased 16.7 per cent.

Commenting on the future outlook, a statement by Barcus, Kindred & Company says:

"The state's fiscal picture is healthy. Significant in strengthening the bonds of local communities is the fact that such items as state aid for schools remain at a high level. The sums represented by these donations would otherwise have to be raised by local communities through increased tax levies."

At the altars of 42,000 Methodist churches during the Week of Dedication, February 27 to March 5, men, women and children will respond to calls from their bishops and pastors for rededication of "self, service and substance" to the wartime emergency program of the Church. Nearly eight million members will contribute to a sacrificial offering which will be used to continue and expand the denomination's ministry to members of the armed forces, dislocated families in war industry centers and refugees in war-torn areas. Foreign missionaries in 46 countries, the Pan-American Institute in Panama, and church extension activities at home and abroad also will receive support from the Week of Dedication offering.

In a few words I would like to convey my appreciation for a swell gift package I have received this noon at the Hospital Postal department. We had a small ration of goodies each week, but now

WOMEN'S RESEARCH ORGANIZATION BANKERS BLDG., MILWAUKEE, WIS.

IT HAS always been our contention that it is just as impossible for us to sell Great Britain or any other foreign country our games of baseball and football as it would be to have Great Britain sell us cricket and rugby. It just can't be done—and it's a waste of time to try it.

For example, my friend, Colonel Red O'Hare, a former West Point tackle, now abroad in the active zone, sends me a column written by a well-known Welsh sporting writer on American football as it looked to him. Here are just a few brief selections:

"I noticed that in the two hours time to play the game the ball was in motion only 14 minutes—"

"The men taking part are so closely bunched together that a lot of obstruction is inevitable. Kicking is discouraged because it puts the other side in possession of the ball. It is the last resort."

"The game did not appear to be nearly as fast as our own. No one taking part in it seemed to run very far, for nearly always when we were getting set for excitement the runner was promptly downed or the referee blew his whistle."

"Altogether it was a colorful adventure, but American Rugby must be an acquired taste." (Like olives or spinach?)

"They tackled fiercely and there was a sigh of relief when it was shown the runner or ball carrier was still alive. The Welsh impression is that the numerous stoppages, the crowding together of friend and foe, do not lend themselves to speed, excitement and to constructive endeavor. It was the lack of continued speed, of unbroken motion, that left its most depressing effect."

A Rather Fair Analysis

Many American football followers will resent this slant. But as Bobby Burns once said:

"Oh, wad some power the giftie gie us
"To see ourselves as ithers see us."

Over in England, Scotland and Wales they don't like American football largely for the reason that after two hours the ball is in motion or the men are in motion only 14 minutes of the 120 minutes consumed.

No one can dispute this flaw or weakness in our game, looking at the show from one angle. Rugby and soccer football have far more continued action, just as basketball and hockey do.

But against this we can give you the game of cricket. This isn't what you would call the fastest or the speediest game ever invented, not even baring chess.

I recall years ago talking with Red Donahue, who pitched for the Phillies and for Cleveland in the time of Nap Lajoie. Red also went out for cricket in Philadelphia, then the U. S. cricket hot spot.

Red abandoned cricket shortly after taking up the game and doing quite well with it.

"Why did you happen to give up cricket?" I asked Donahue one day. "I'll tell you, Grant," he said, "why I decided to abandon this very estimable competition."

"We had been playing two days in this match against English invaders and I asked how things stood. They told me we were now playing the second inning. I promptly retired. I wasn't busy but I never had time to give a week to one game, including time out for tea."

So you can see how it works both ways. In many ways we don't like the games they play, and they don't like the games we play. Both are either too fast or too slow, if not too young or too old.

International Games

There are still certain international games played around a somewhat battered and harassed planet. These games include golf, tennis, boxing and to a certain extent soccer football and basketball. And of course track and field, the basis of all Olympic sport.

Track and field are the world-wide competitions where running and jumping and heaving missiles go back to the Cave Man era, requiring no extensive complications.

For example, in golf Hagen and Sarazen, beyond the United States, have had some of their hottest matches in England, Scotland, France, Japan, Australia, India, South Africa and South America.

Golf even outrages tennis in this respect, although Davis Cup matches almost circle the so-called globe.

Boxing? For over 20 years there have been almost no good ring fighters outside of the U. S., although Schmeling of Germany and Carnera of Italy won two rather shady titles.

For all that the U. S. A. can still get along pretty well with its own version of football and baseball. These are two of the games the many millions love and understand—the games they will stick to until Grand Old Gehenna is packed with icebergs.

NEW IDEAS OF GOVERNMENT
FIND SLOW GOING IN OZARKS

Some Reforms of Administration Get Approval but 'Intolerable' Interference Bothers Ava, Mo.

By BARROW LYONS

(EDITOR'S NOTE—This is one of a series of articles written for this paper by Barrow Lyons, staff correspondent of Western Newspaper Union. He has just completed an extended trip through the nation and in these reports gives his first-hand impressions of what rural America is thinking as we enter the third year of war and the first weeks of a presidential election year. Any opinions expressed are the writer's and not necessarily those of this newspaper.)

AVA, MO.—Here in the heart of the Missouri Ozarks, the term "hillbilly" is one of highest approval. Recognition as a "hillbilly" admits one into the inner circle of Ozark pioneers, whose fathers or grandfathers moved westward from the mountains of Kentucky or Tennessee a generation or two ago. The comradeship and joys of the fraternity are great and exclusive.

Ava is the county seat of Douglas county, a town of about 1,300 people, which does business out of proportion to its size, because it is the only town in the county. Few farms around Ava are rich farms, because the soil of the Ozarks is not rich soil; but since dairy farming has largely displaced "row crop" farming, and herds have been vastly improved, the prosperity of the county has increased.

In spite of the fact that citizens of Ava express great satisfaction with their town, they will tell you that the New Deal has made sad inroads upon their way of life. WPA, PWA, AAA, CCC, and other alphabetic agencies have gone a long way toward making the poorer people of the county too lazy to work, they declare, and the "intolerable" interference of the OPA with farmers and shopkeepers almost incites rebellion.

Even in the election of 1932, the Democrats did not carry Douglas county. In 1942 they were given only 20 per cent.

C. H. Hibbard, county superintendent of schools, had a theory to explain this intense Republicanism.

"Politics here is partly biological," he said. "It's hereditary—right in the blood. Take my own case. My father used to tell me how he thought of the d— Rebels and the Democrats as one and the same. This country is peopled by men and women who came from the hills of Tennessee and Kentucky and they're very independent. The upper part of the state was settled by slaves, who brought their slaves up the river from the South. We've always disliked slavery here."

The story is similar to that one hears in other rural districts. Large sums of money spent on roads considered unessential are mentioned. Subsidies are abhorred. But the biggest headache is OPA, which places restrictions upon the handling of foods grown in the county, and makes it necessary for country storekeepers to keep records they consider outrageously unnecessary. One might easily gather the impression that the New Deal was an unmitigated evil, except for bits of praise that are slipped in between the many hard words. For instance:

A. L. Kropp, feed and fertilizer dealer: "Business is very good right now. Even after the AAA stopped putting fertilizer out, we sold even more than before, because the AAA was teaching people how to use it, and what it can do for them."

J. W. Reese, president Citizens bank: "If the Farm Security administration here didn't have the right kind of a man it would be pretty bad. The man they have won't make a loan to anyone to whom we can loan money. He's built up a lot of farmers so they can get credit at our bank. I don't believe he's lost a lot of money on his FSA loans, except on last spring's loans. He has co-operated with us pretty nicely—just as nicely as we could ask for."

Paul Clausner, manager of the Carnation Milk receiving station: "Our plant in Ava is one of the largest receiving stations of the company. The volume of milk produced here in recent years has increased enormously since various agencies have gotten the people into dairy farming."

So the New Deal hasn't ruined Ava; and if one contacts the clients of the Farm Security administration on the pleasant hillsides and in the hollows of the Ozarks around the town, one finds a hardy and hard-working lot of men. George Mullins, the Douglas county FSA supervisor, was unwilling to disclose the records of his clients, but willing to take one out to the farms and let his clients speak for themselves.

FSA Farmers Tell Their Own Stories

Take Farmer A, a man about 30 years old, who in 1940 owned seven cows and was capable and ready to work, but could not obtain a loan from the banks because he bore the stigma of having been a WPA worker. The WPA was laying off men. Farmer A, when he was turned down by the bankers, went to Mr. Mullins. He obtained a loan of $275, which set him up with two full-bred Jersey cows, pigs, farm machinery, and fertilizer. Mostly with his axe, he built himself a snug log barn. He also enlarged his chickenhouse.

He had great energy and will—and his estate grew. When his pure-bred cows brought increase, he sold his scrub cows, and now has six cows worth about $100 each, a young pure-bred bull, a lot more pigs and chickens, fields that have been fertilized for two years, and wire fences. He is well on the road to becoming a prosperous farmer.

Take Farmer B. He was in the other day to pay off $250 more on his $667 in FSA loans. Now he owes only $219 on the principal. When he got his first loan in 1939 he owed $250 on the place he had bought from a brother. He was figuring up his net worth a few days ago and it came almost to $2,600. His brother has a very similar story.

These examples are not exceptional among the more than 500 farmers whom FSA has helped to get a start, or a new start, in Douglas county. They were selected at random. Others visited had similar experiences. FSA helps them make definite plans for farming and home-building. Of course, not all FSA loans are successful—but neither are all bank loans. FSA, however, is far more interested in building independent citizens than profits—and the record in Douglas county under George Mullins is exceptional.

But the Ozarks resist change. Fertilization of fields, up-breeding of stock, contouring of farms, have hard sledding. So do innovations in government. And then when OPA comes along and tells them they are criminals if they slaughter pigs for their own tables, the reaction is terrific.

Outside of Ava—out in the hills—many of the people are much more friendly to the alphabetic agencies than in the town—but the many irritations of federal supervision have made most of them return to the Republican fold.

As Ava, Missouri, Views It . . .

A few years ago numerous influential citizens of Ava received through the mail mysterious gifts of $10, $20, even $50 bills, and cashier's checks, all mailed from Kansas City with notes similar to the following:

"I was sick and you visited me. I was thirsty and you gave me to drink. He who rebels against his government is in open sin and shame. Beware of the New Deal, but still remain the same."

There were many theories to explain for these gifts and messages, but no one suggested that they were an effort to poison the minds of Ava citizens against the New Deal, because most of the townsmen already heartily disliked the Democratic administration. Most of them still do.

At Last John Got Chance To Be Side-Seat Driver

The wife was busily engaged in sewing an apron when her husband drew his chair up beside her sewing machine.

"Don't you think you are running too fast?" he said. "Look out! You'll sew the wrong seam! Mind that corner, now! Slow down, watch your fingers! Steady, now I tell you you're going too fast!"

"What's the matter with you, John?" said his wife, alarmed. "I've been running this machine for years and don't need you to tell me how now!"

"Well, dear," replied the husband, "I thought you might like me to help you since you help me drive the car."

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Normally U. S. motorists need 30 to 35 million new replacement tires a year. In 1942 and 1943 combined, only about 17 million tires will have reached vehicle owners through rationing offices.

Koroseal is "Plasticized polyvinyl chloride," a B. F. Goodrich rubber-like material that before the war was used in more than 300 different products. Koroseal has now gone to war.

Wheel alignment means much to tire mileage these days, with so many old cars in service. Frequent checking of camber and toe-in in front wheels will prove a rubber and mileage saver.
